OUR ETHOS

“When you have enough, you don’t build a higher wall; you build a longer table.”

Bec&Brent, Long Table Farm

LONG TABLE FARM

Coming to Wisemans Retreat
— Mid Feb 2026.

The paddock to plate journey at Long Table Farm Restaurant starts in the only place it can: at our own, regeneratively managed farm, the namesake of our restaurant, Long Table Farm. Here we care deeply for the land, the animals it nurtures, and the community that surrounds us. We believe regenerative, small scale farming is essential in producing the most delicious food and that it must always be shared.

We love what we do. Brent and Bec, both of whom manage and curate the farm, live and breathe what they do; for Brent and Bec, regenerative farming isn't a marketing term, it is simply the way it has always been done. This is who they are.

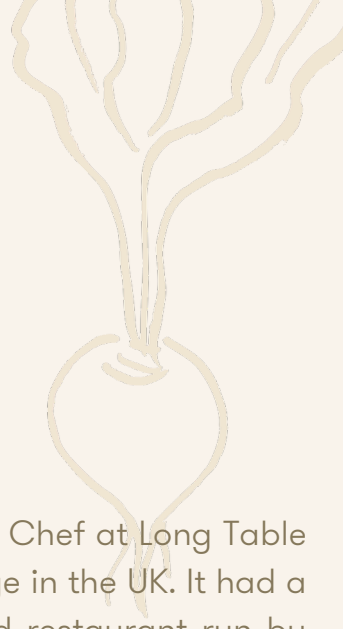

And because of this, Long Table Farm is more than just a name. It's the idea of bringing together family and friends. While our farm is the origin of all things that grace our tables, it is also the inspiration for our core belief: "When you have enough, you don't build a higher wall; you build a longer table."

Our ethos is simple: grow slowly, always seasonally and waste nothing. We take the best seasonal ingredients from our farm, treat them with respect, and let their natural flavours sing. This is the food which we will serve you at Long Table Farm Restaurant.

It is food produced and crafted as it should be, with love and care, for the enjoyment of the community, both near and far.

Bringing the joys of food, fire and conviviality to your celebration along our enchanting river.

Ed Sargent is creative director and Executive Chef at Long Table Farm Restaurant. Ed grew up in a small village in the UK. It had a Post Office, a bakery and a Michelin-starred restaurant run by the mercurial chef-proprietor Rene Rieunier. Somewhere between the tantrums (Rene's, not Ed's), the searing hot pans, and the frenetic energy of a commercial kitchen, he fell in love with the creativity and art of cooking for others; communicating passion and love through the food he puts on the table.

Over the last 20 years his passion for food has grown into an integral part of who he is. Inspired by nose to tail cooking and a deep love for regenerative farming, Ed cooks at Long Table Farm Restaurant exclusively with the sustainable, seasonal produce from our own farm and from likeminded growers and suppliers who share our ethos.

Be it grass-fed and finished meat, line-caught local fish or organic fruit and vegetables, his sole focus is on creating the most delicious food for you and the most memorable of experiences.
